Abstracts

Bozhi Glycopeptide Injection is a pharmaceutical product classified as a glycopeptide antibiotic, primarily used for the treatment of severe bacterial infections caused by Gram-positive organisms, particularly methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) and other multidrug-resistant strains. It functions by inhibiting bacterial cell wall synthesis, making it a critical therapeutic option in hospital settings where conventional antibiotics have proven ineffective. As a prescription biologic, it is administered intravenously under medical supervision, often reserved for cases involving complicated skin and soft tissue infections, bloodstream infections, or pneumonia where resistance or patient intolerance to first-line treatments exists. Its formulation and clinical application align with broader glycopeptide antibiotics like vancomycin, though specific derivatives or branded versions may offer variations in pharmacokinetics, side effect profiles, or dosing convenience.

The global Bozhi Glycopeptide Injection market size was estimated at USD 420.0 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.50% during the forecast period.
