Midstream consists of the design, production, and assembly of the sanitary napkins, where manufacturers integrate raw materials into panty-type structures with breathable, leak-proof, and absorbent features, often investing in innovations for comfort and skin health. Downstream includes the distribution and sales channels, covering supermarkets, pharmacies, e-commerce platforms, and specialized feminine hygiene retailers, along with marketing and brand development activities. Additionally, downstream encompasses end-users?women seeking comfort, protection, and discretion?whose preferences drive product innovation and influence the overall growth of the market. The single-line production capacity of Breathable Cotton Panty-type Sanitary Napkins is 125 to 133 M units per year, the average gross profit margin was 45.3%.
