Abstracts

The chicken plucker machine is a mechanical device designed to automate and expedite the process of removing feathers from poultry after slaughter, typically used by small to medium-scale poultry farmers, homesteaders, and processors to improve efficiency, reduce labor costs, and maintain hygiene by minimizing manual handling. These machines generally consist of a rotating drum fitted with rubber fingers or beaters that agitate and frictionally strip feathers from the bird's body, often integrated with water spray systems to aid in cleaning. They range from compact, manually operated models suitable for home or small farm use to larger, automated systems capable of processing multiple birds simultaneously in commercial settings. Key features often include adjustable speed settings, durable construction materials such as stainless steel or food-grade plastics, and designs that minimize damage to the poultry carcass, ensuring product quality for further processing or sale.

The global Chicken Plucker Machine market size was estimated at USD 520.75 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.20% during the forecast period.
