Abstracts

Cis-decahydronaphthalene, a stereoisomer of decalin, is a bicyclic saturated hydrocarbon characterized by its fused cyclohexane rings with hydrogen atoms oriented on the same side of the ring junction, resulting in a cis configuration that imparts distinct physical and chemical properties compared to its trans counterpart, including higher density and boiling point, as well as greater reactivity due to increased ring strain. This compound is primarily synthesized through the catalytic hydrogenation of naphthalene or tetralin under controlled conditions and serves as a high-boiling, non-polar solvent in industrial applications, particularly in the formulation of paints, resins, and coatings where its stability and solvency power are valued, as well as finding niche roles as a reaction medium, a component in jet fuels, and a starting material in organic synthesis for pharmaceuticals and specialty chemicals.

The global Cis Decahydronaphthalene market size was estimated at USD 180.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 3.80% during the forecast period.
