Abstracts

The market for Citrus Bergamot Extract is characterized by growing consumer demand for natural health supplements, driven by increasing awareness of its purported benefits in supporting cardiovascular health, cholesterol management, and metabolic function. Extracted from the rind of the Citrus bergamia Risso fruit, primarily cultivated in the Calabria region of Italy, the product is valued for its high concentration of polyphenols and flavonoids, such as brutieridin and melitidin, which are believed to inhibit cholesterol synthesis similarly to statins but through a natural mechanism. Market growth is further fueled by the rising prevalence of lifestyle-related health conditions, such as hypercholesterolemia and metabolic syndrome, alongside a broader shift toward plant-based and preventive healthcare solutions. Key distribution channels include online retail, health food stores, and pharmaceutical outlets, with major players focusing on product standardization, clinical research validation, and geographic expansion to capitalize on emerging opportunities in North America, Europe, and Asia-Pacific. However, the market faces challenges related to supply chain constraints due to the fruit's specific growing requirements, price volatility, regulatory scrutiny over health claims, and competition from alternative natural supplements like red yeast rice and artichoke extract.

The global Citrus Bergamot Extract market size was estimated at USD 120.45 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.85% during the forecast period.
