Abstracts

Cleanroom rental services involve businesses or individuals paying rent to a professional service provider to use cleanroom or laboratory space that meets specific environmental standards. This asset-light model allows users to quickly obtain the high-standard cleanroom environment required for production and R&D without having to invest heavily in building high-specification facilities. As a light-asset operation model, the development prospects of clean room rental services are closely linked to the expansion of high-end manufacturing and scientific research fields such as semiconductors, biomedicine, and new energy. These industries have extremely stringent requirements on the cleanliness, temperature, humidity, and micro-vibration control of the production environment, driving the continued growth of the clean room rental market. In the future, with the advancement of modular and intelligent clean room technology and the increasing demand for green energy conservation under the "dual carbon" goals, clean room rental services will pay more attention to flexibility, rapid deployment capabilities and cost-effectiveness, providing efficient solutions for emerging enterprises, R&D institutions and short-term projects, and supporting scientific and technological innovation and industrial upgrading.

The global Cleanroom Rental market size was estimated at USD 623.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.20% during the forecast period.
