Report Overview

Clove leaf oil, derived from the leaves of the Syzygium aromaticum plant through steam distillation, is a versatile essential oil with a high eugenol content (typically 70-90%), which gives it strong antiseptic, analgesic, and anti-inflammatory properties. It is widely used in pharmaceuticals, dental care, aromatherapy, and as a flavoring agent in food and beverages. The oil's demand is driven by its applications in traditional medicine, personal care products, and natural insecticides. Key producing regions include Indonesia, Madagascar, and Sri Lanka, where clove cultivation is prevalent. The market is influenced by trends favoring natural and organic products, though price volatility due to crop yields and geopolitical factors in producing countries can impact supply.
