Report Overview

Cod liver oil is a nutrient-rich supplement derived from the liver of codfish, primarily Atlantic cod (Gadus morhua). It is valued for its high concentrations of omega-3 fatty acids (EPA and DHA), vitamin A, and vitamin D, making it a popular dietary supplement for supporting immune function, cardiovascular health, joint mobility, and cognitive development. Traditionally consumed in liquid form, modern variations include softgel capsules and flavored options to improve palatability. The product is widely used in nutraceutical, pharmaceutical, and functional food industries, with demand driven by growing consumer awareness of preventive healthcare, the rise of immunity-boosting supplements post-pandemic, and increasing preference for natural sources of essential nutrients. Regulatory standards, sustainability concerns in fisheries, and competition from plant-based omega-3 alternatives (e.g., algae oil) influence market dynamics. Key markets include North America, Europe, and Asia-Pacific, with Norway and Iceland being major producers due to their robust fishing industries.

The global Cod Liver Oil market size was estimated at USD 65.7 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 3.03% during the forecast period.
