Abstracts

Cold pressed peanut oil is a premium edible oil extracted from peanuts using mechanical pressing methods at low temperatures, which preserves the natural flavor, aroma, and nutritional properties of the peanuts without the use of chemicals or high-heat processing. This method retains antioxidants, vitamins, and essential fatty acids, distinguishing it from refined or chemically extracted peanut oils that undergo bleaching, deodorizing, or other treatments. Valued for its rich, nutty taste and health benefits, cold pressed peanut oil is commonly used in salad dressings, dips, and gourmet cooking, as well as in skincare and haircare products due to its moisturizing properties. Its production aligns with growing consumer demand for natural, minimally processed, and sustainably sourced food products.
