Report Overview

Cold pressed soap, also known as cold process soap, is a traditional method of soap-making that involves combining fats or oils with an alkali (such as lye) at low temperatures to preserve the natural properties of the ingredients. Unlike commercially produced soaps, which often undergo high-heat processing and contain synthetic additives, cold pressed soap retains its glycerin—a natural moisturizer—and is typically enriched with botanical extracts, essential oils, and other nourishing components. This artisanal approach results in a gentler, more skin-friendly product that appeals to consumers seeking organic, eco-friendly, and chemical-free personal care options. The growing demand for natural and sustainable beauty products has positioned cold pressed soap as a niche yet rapidly expanding segment within the global soap market.

The global Cold Pressed Soap market size was estimated at USD 120.63 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.25% during the forecast period.
