Abstracts

Companion animal external dewormers are medications or products used to eliminate or control external parasites on companion animals, such as dogs and cats. These dewormers are typically applied topically or administered through sprays, spot-on treatments, shampoos, or collars to target parasites that reside on the animal's skin, fur, or ears. The dewormer typically comes in the form of topical solutions or sprays that are applied directly to the animal's skin or fur. These solutions contain active ingredients that have insecticidal or acaricidal properties, killing and repelling external parasites upon contact. Companion Animal External Dewormers are available in various strengths and formulations, allowing pet owners to choose the most suitable option based on the size and species of their companion animal. It is important to carefully follow the instructions provided by the manufacturer and consult a veterinarian before administering any medication to ensure its safety and efficacy. Regular use of an external dewormer can help protect companion animals from infestations, reduce the risk of disease transmission, and promote overall health and well-being. It is typically recommended to use these treatments as part of a comprehensive parasite prevention program, which may include other measures such as flea and tick collars, oral medications, and frequent cleaning and grooming of the animal's living environment.

The global Companion Animal External Dewormer market size was estimated at USD 2305.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.00% during the forecast period.
