Abstracts

In clinical trials, comparator drugs are used to compare the efficacy of a drug in development to an existing treatment. The drugs might be a marketed therapy or a placebo, depending on the type of clinical trial. Comparator sourcing gives drug companies access to these drugs in large enough quantities. It does so quickly to ensure the smooth running of a clinical trial. It requires a robust supply chain, forecasting operations, and logistics expertise. There has been a growing focus on comparative drug effectiveness in the global pharmaceutical industry. This is leading to pressure on pharmaceutical companies / sponsors to frame robust strategies for selection of a comparator drug, and then sourcing and maintaining an uninterrupted supply of that drug to all trial sites in a cost-effective manner. Direct comparator sourcing can be carried out by innovators / drug producers, wholesalers and local distributors. They follow either the central or local sourcing model depending on the study needs. Global key players of Comparator Drug Sourcing include Cencora, Thermo Fisher Scientific, McKesson Corporation, Almac Group, Catalent, etc. The top five players hold a share about 77%. America is the largest market, and has a share about 40%, followed by Europe and APAC with share 31% and 26%, separately. In terms of product type, Local Sourcing is the largest segment, occupied for a share of 50%. In terms of application, Drug Producers/Manufacturers has a share about 46 percent.

The global Comparator Drug Sourcing market size was estimated at USD 1224.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.10% during the forecast period.
