Abstracts

Contract brewing refers to a business model in which a brewery produces beer for another brand or company (the client). In this model, the client may not have their own brewing facilities, or, due to insufficient production capacity, cost control, or product line expansion, outsources the production of beer to a brewery with specialized equipment, technology, and production capabilities. Contract brewing allowed brands to focus on recipe development, branding, and marketing, while outsourcing the actual brewing process. This lowered the barriers to entry and enabled smaller players to bring their products to market more quickly. Established breweries with excess production capacity often engaged in contract brewing to optimize their equipment usage and generate additional revenue streams. The rapid development of the craft beer market has driven the growth of the contract brewing market. Craft beer brands are typically small in scale and lack sufficient production facilities and capital. Contract brewing provides them with a low-cost, high-efficiency production solution, allowing them to focus on brand promotion and market expansion.

The global Contract Brewing market size was estimated at USD 3529.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.80% during the forecast period.
