Abstracts

Corporate due diligence is a professional business service designed to help clients gain a comprehensive understanding of target companies before making major decisions such as investment and mergers and acquisitions through systematic review and evaluation. It involves a series of investigations into the target company's assets and liabilities, operations and finances, legal relationships, and the opportunities and potential risks it faces. This service is one of the most crucial aspects of the merger and acquisition process, with its core objective being to assess the target company's true operating conditions in order to identify and mitigate potential business risks to the greatest extent possible. During the investigation, professional agencies utilize their expertise in management, finance, and taxation, along with their resources, to develop independent viewpoints that evaluate the merits of the acquisition and provide support for management's decision-making. The due diligence services industry is poised for continued growth in the coming years, primarily driven by increasingly stringent global requirements for business risk control and compliance. The industry is moving towards a data-driven model, increasingly needing to provide clients with detailed data insights and ratings about their business partners. Simultaneously, the application of advanced technologies such as artificial intelligence will further enhance the efficiency and accuracy of due diligence, transforming traditional audit and analysis processes and helping companies make more informed decisions in complex business environments by realistically anticipating the future.
