Abstracts

Corporate E Learning solutions are a comprehensive system that uses electronic technology and the Internet platform to help companies train employees, manage knowledge, and improve their skills. Learning Management System (LMS) is the core part of enterprise e-learning solutions. It is used to manage and organize learning content, track students' learning progress, and evaluate learning results. For example, it can record employees' learning time and test scores in each course module, and generate learning reports based on these data to facilitate managers and students to understand their own learning situation. User role management can distinguish different user roles, such as administrators, lecturers, and students. Administrators can set up systems, publish courses, and manage user permissions; lecturers can upload teaching content, design course structures, and conduct online teaching; students can study courses, take exams, and communicate and interact. The online learning platform has a simple and clear operation interface, which makes it easy for students to quickly find the required courses and learning tools. For example, the classification navigation bar can easily access the course catalog of different topics, such as management skills, technical training, professional literacy, etc. With the acceleration of digital transformation and the emphasis on improving employee skills, more and more companies are willing to invest in e-learning solutions. In China, the corporate e-learning market is also rising rapidly. In particular, with the rapid development of Internet companies and the digital transformation of traditional companies, market demand continues to increase. In order to maintain technological leadership and update the knowledge of employees, large Internet companies continue to increase their investment in e-learning systems. Employees can study anywhere with an Internet connection according to their work schedule and personal time. Use big data to analyze employees' learning behavior, interests and work needs to provide them with more accurate course recommendations. In some skill training areas, such as equipment operation and dangerous scene simulation, VR and AR technologies can provide an immersive learning experience.
