Report Overview

Credit settlement refers to the process of negotiating with creditors to reduce the total debt owed by a borrower, typically as an alternative to bankruptcy. This involves a third-party mediator or the debtor directly proposing a lump-sum payment or restructured repayment terms that are lower than the original obligation. The product is commonly used by individuals or businesses facing financial distress, offering a way to resolve outstanding debts without the long-term credit damage associated with bankruptcy. Credit settlement services may be offered by specialized firms, debt relief companies, or legal advisors, often charging fees based on the amount of debt resolved. The practice is regulated in many jurisdictions to prevent predatory practices, with eligibility often requiring proof of financial hardship. While it provides relief to debtors, creditors may agree to settlements to recover a portion of otherwise uncollectible debts, making it a compromise between liquidation and full repayment.

The global Credit Settlement market size was estimated at USD 1001.1 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.50% during the forecast period.
