Abstracts

Crypto stablecoins are cryptographic digital currencies that maintain their price stability through a specific mechanism. They aim to combine the value stability of traditional legal tender with the decentralization, global circulation, and efficient settlement characteristics of cryptocurrencies. Crypto stablecoins are usually anchored to fiat currencies such as the U.S. dollar and the euro, or to assets such as gold. Their stabilization mechanisms can be divided into fiat currency collateral (such as USDT, USDC), crypto asset collateral (such as DAI), and algorithmic regulation (such as FRAX). They are widely used in scenarios such as digital asset trading, cross-border payments, decentralized finance (DeFi), and value storage. While promoting the development of the crypto economy ecosystem, they also face challenges such as regulatory compliance, collateral transparency, and systemic risks.

The global Crypto Stablecoin market size was estimated at USD 3510.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 13.60% during the forecast period.
