Report Overview

Custody services refer to the safekeeping and administration of financial assets, such as securities, cash, or other valuables, on behalf of institutional or individual clients. These services include asset protection, settlement of transactions, corporate actions processing, income collection, and reporting, ensuring compliance with regulatory requirements. Custodians, typically banks or specialized financial institutions, act as third-party intermediaries to mitigate risks like theft, loss, or mismanagement while providing ancillary services such as tax reclamation, foreign exchange, and performance analytics. The growing complexity of global financial markets, coupled with increasing regulatory scrutiny, has expanded the scope of custody services to include cybersecurity, ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) monitoring, and blockchain-based custody solutions for digital assets. The demand for custody services is driven by institutional investors, hedge funds, pension funds, and family offices seeking secure, efficient, and compliant asset management solutions in an increasingly interconnected and digitized financial ecosystem.
