The daily glassware market encompasses a wide range of glass products designed for everyday use, including drinking glasses, tumblers, pitchers, and storage containers. These products are primarily made from tempered or soda-lime glass, offering durability, clarity, and resistance to thermal shock. Glassware is favored for its non-reactive properties, ensuring food and beverage safety, as well as its aesthetic appeal, which aligns with both casual and formal dining settings. The market is segmented by product type, material composition (e.g., borosilicate for heat resistance), and end-use (household, hospitality, and commercial).
