Report Overview
The dance arcade machine was launched in Japan in 1998 and passed to Taiwan. In mainland China, the dance machine is still in the process of development. The earliest dance machine in English is called DanceDanceRevolution, literally translated as dance revolution, referred to as DDR. This is a music rhythm type game. The biggest difference from the traditional video game is that the traditional video game uses the remote control bar plus button or four button handle, and the dance machine uses the player's feet to complete the game.
