Abstracts

Dehulled sunflower cake, also known as sunflower meal, is a byproduct of sunflower seed oil extraction where the hard outer hulls have been removed prior to processing, resulting in a protein-rich, fibrous feed ingredient primarily used in animal nutrition, particularly for ruminants, poultry, and swine, owing to its high crude protein content (typically 28-42%), balanced amino acid profile, and favorable fiber levels, making it a valuable alternative to other oilseed meals like soybean or rapeseed meal in compound feed formulations.
