Abstracts

A display advertising system is a digital marketing platform that enables advertisers to purchase, manage, and optimize visual ad placements across websites, apps, and social media channels, typically using formats such as banners, rich media, video, and native ads. These systems often operate through programmatic technologies, including real-time bidding (RTB) and demand-side platforms (DSPs), allowing for automated, data-driven ad buying that targets specific audiences based on demographics, behavior, and contextual relevance. Key components include ad servers, ad exchanges, and supply-side platforms (SSPs), which together facilitate the efficient matching of advertiser demand with publisher inventory. The primary objectives are to enhance brand visibility, drive user engagement, and achieve measurable conversions, supported by analytics and performance tracking tools that provide insights into impressions, click-through rates, and return on ad spend (ROAS).

The global Display Advertising System market size was estimated at USD 26450.0 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 12.30% during the forecast period.
