Report Overview

Dog dental care refers to products and services designed to maintain oral hygiene in dogs, including toothbrushes, toothpaste, dental chews, water additives, professional cleanings, and specialized diets. This market has grown significantly due to rising pet ownership and increased awareness of the link between oral health and overall well-being in pets. Owners are increasingly investing in preventive care to avoid costly veterinary treatments for periodontal disease, which affects over 80% of dogs by age three. Premiumization trends, where pet owners opt for higher-quality, vet-recommended products, further drive growth. The market is segmented into at-home care (dominated by chew treats and brushing products) and professional services, with e-commerce playing a key role in accessibility. Innovation, such as enzymatic toothpaste and natural ingredient-based chews, caters to demand for safer, effective solutions. Competition is intense among brands like Virbac, Greenies, and Pedigree, while startups focus on niche, sustainable offerings. Regulatory standards and pet humanization continue to shape product development and consumer preferences.
