Abstracts

Ecotourism is a professional form of tourism service centered on sustainable development and focused on natural areas. Its fundamental aim is to achieve a harmonious balance between environmental protection, local community benefits, and environmental education for tourists through carefully designed tourism experiences. Services go beyond traditional sightseeing, encompassing professional guided ecotourism, low-impact accommodation and dining, and in-depth nature-based experiential activities, all while strictly adhering to ecological carrying capacity management principles. It requires service providers to be not only tourism operators but also environmental protectors and disseminators of nature knowledge, ensuring that tourism activities do not damage native ecosystems and that a portion of the economic benefits are directly reinvested in local conservation efforts and community development, thereby promoting harmonious coexistence between humans and nature. Ecotourism services have broad prospects and are evolving from a niche tourism product into a core model leading the sustainable development of the global tourism industry. With the awakening of global ecological awareness and the advancement of "dual carbon" goals, the market demand for high-quality, responsible, and immersive nature tours will continue to grow rapidly. In the future, its development will exhibit three major trends: first, technological empowerment, utilizing big data, AR/VR, and bioacoustic monitoring to enhance the scientific nature of tourist experience and ecological management; second, product deepening, expanding from mass nature sightseeing to themed, niche nature education and conservation volunteer travel; and third, value integration, more closely integrating with rural revitalization, biodiversity conservation, and the construction of national park systems, becoming an important practical path for the concept that "lucid waters and lush mountains are invaluable assets." The market will gradually become more standardized and differentiated, with high-end customized services and community-led services becoming the twin engines of growth.

The global Ecotourism Services market size was estimated at USD 5512.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 8.20% during the forecast period.
