Abstracts

A Flexible Intermediate Bulk Container (FIBC), commonly known as a bulk bag, is a large, flexible, and lightweight container made of woven polypropylene designed for storing and transporting bulk materials. FIBCs are primarily used for dry, granular, and powdery substances such as chemicals, food ingredients, and construction materials. They are available in various designs, including U-panel, circular, and baffled bags, to accommodate different industry needs. FIBCs are cost-effective, reusable, and easy to handle, making them a preferred choice for bulk packaging in agriculture, food processing, and industrial sectors.An Intermediate Bulk Container (IBC) is a rigid, reusable storage and transport container designed for handling liquid, semi-liquid, and granular materials. IBCs are typically made of high-density polyethylene (HDPE) with a metal cage for added strength, or they can be constructed from stainless steel for high-purity applications. They are widely used in the chemical, pharmaceutical, and food industries due to their durability, stackability, and efficient space utilization. Compared to FIBCs, IBCs are better suited for liquids and hazardous materials, offering spill-resistant and secure storage solutions.

The global FIBC and IBC market size was estimated at USD 12160.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.90% during the forecast period.
