Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Figure 8 Resistance Band competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. In 2024, the global production of figure-eight resistance bands was approximately 20 million units, with an average selling price of about $2-$15 per band and a gross profit margin of about 40%. Single-line production capacity was approximately 500,000-2 million units per band. A figure-eight resistance band is an elastic training tool shaped like the number "8," typically made of materials such as latex, TPE, or rubber. Its figure-eight structure makes it particularly efficient and stable during pushing, pulling, and leg abduction movements. It has two fixed wristbands (or anklebands) and a central elastic connecting band, using elastic resistance to provide strength training. The upstream of the figure-eight resistance band industry is the chemical industry, which provides raw materials such as latex and TPE elastomers; the midstream consists of manufacturers who process the raw materials into finished products through injection molding or splicing processes and then brand and package them; the downstream reaches end users through channels such as gyms, rehabilitation centers, and e-commerce platforms. The demand primarily stems from the global mass fitness population's need for portable home training and muscle building, the physical therapy field's need for rehabilitation training tools, and the gym and group classes' need for low-cost, diversified training programs. Ultimately, it is driven by the rise in public health awareness and the trend of home fitness.

The global Figure 8 Resistance Band market size was estimated at USD 140.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.00% during the forecast period.
