Abstracts

Follow on formula milk is a specialized nutritional product designed for infants aged 6 to 12 months, intended to complement or replace breastfeeding as part of a progressively diversified diet. It is formulated to meet the specific nutritional needs of older infants who have begun consuming solid foods but still require supplemental nutrition for optimal growth and development. Unlike infant formula (0?6 months), follow on formula typically has adjusted levels of certain nutrients, such as higher iron content to support increasing blood volume, and may include variations in protein, fats, and micronutrients to align with the developmental stage and dietary transition of this age group. Regulatory frameworks in many countries, including the EU and US, strictly govern its composition, labeling, and marketing to ensure safety and appropriateness, distinguishing it both from standard infant formula and toddler milks while emphasizing its role as a supplementary?not sole?source of nutrition during weaning.

The global Follow On Formula Milk market size was estimated at USD 13450.0 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.80% during the forecast period.
