Abstracts

Form Fill Seal (FFS) films, also known as horizontal or vertical form-fill-seal films, are advanced flexible packaging materials specifically engineered for automated packaging machinery that forms, fills, and seals products in a single continuous operation. These films are typically multilayer laminates or co-extruded structures composed of materials such as polyethylene (PE), polypropylene (PP), polyester (PET), nylon (PA), and ethylene vinyl alcohol (EVOH), tailored to provide critical properties including high tensile strength, puncture resistance, excellent barrier properties against moisture, oxygen, and light, heat-sealability, and machinability at high speeds. They are widely utilized across the food and beverage, pharmaceutical, personal care, and industrial sectors for packaging items ranging from snacks, dairy, and frozen foods to tablets, medical devices, and hardware, offering advantages such as extended shelf life, product protection, operational efficiency, and sustainability through potential lightweighting and recyclability enhancements.
