Abstracts

The forward facing car seat is a specialized child safety device designed for use in motor vehicles, intended for children who have outgrown rear-facing seats but are not yet tall or heavy enough to use only the vehicle?s seat belt system. It functions by securely restraining the child in a forward-facing position, utilizing a five-point harness system to distribute crash forces across the strongest parts of the body?the shoulders and hips?and is anchored to the vehicle via either the LATCH system (Lower Anchors and Tethers for Children) or the vehicle?s seat belt. These seats are rigorously tested and must comply with stringent federal safety standards, such as FMVSS 213 in the United States, which mandate specific performance criteria for crash protection, including frontal and side-impact tests. Typically recommended for children approximately aged 2 to 7 years, or those weighing between 20 and 65 pounds and meeting height requirements set by the manufacturer, forward facing car seats represent a critical stage in child passenger safety, bridging the gap between infant carriers and booster seats.
