Abstracts

Front facing baby carriers are specialized wearable devices designed to securely hold an infant or toddler in an upright position against the caregiver's chest, with the child oriented forward to allow visual engagement with the surrounding environment. These carriers typically feature structured, ergonomic designs with padded shoulder straps, waist belts for weight distribution, and adjustable seating to accommodate various developmental stages, prioritizing both infant comfort through proper hip and spine positioning and caregiver ease of use, often incorporating breathable fabrics, safety buckles, and additional support features such as headrests for younger babies.
