Abstracts

Frozen Chicken Paws refers to a kind of food that is processed by cleaning, processing and quickly freezing chicken paws for long-term storage and transportation. Chicken paws are usually extracted from the chickens after slaughtering in poultry processing plants. After preliminary processing such as cleaning, dehairing and nail removal, they are placed in freezing equipment for freezing. Frozen Chicken Paws is a food category that is gaining increasing attention in the global food market, especially among consumers in Asia and some European and American countries. It has become a favorite food for many people because of its unique taste and rich nutritional value. As consumers' demand for convenient and long-term storable food increases, the market demand for Frozen Chicken Paws has increased year by year, especially among young people and those who pursue a convenient lifestyle. Its consumer market has shown a strong growth momentum. In China, Frozen Chicken Paws, as a traditional local delicacy, has become a part of the daily table, especially in southern regions such as Guangdong, Guangxi, Fujian and other places. With the rapid development of China's economy and consumption upgrading, Frozen Chicken Paws is not only widely used in home kitchens, but also has become a popular food in takeaway platforms, night market stalls, and restaurant chains. The processing technology of Frozen Chicken Paws has been continuously improved. From the initial simple freezing to the diversified processing methods combined with modern food processing technology, the types and flavors of frozen chicken feet on the market are becoming more and more abundant. For example, Frozen Chicken Paws with various flavors such as spicy, sauce, braised, and barbecue are deeply loved by consumers, especially young people. In addition, the demand for Frozen Chicken Paws in foreign markets is also gradually increasing, especially consumers in Southeast Asia, Africa, and some European and American countries have begun to accept and love this delicacy. In some developed countries, Frozen Chicken Paws are mostly regarded as exotic delicacies and are gradually loved by cross-cultural consumers. For example, in some countries and regions in Africa, due to the rich nutritional value of chicken feet, Frozen Chicken Paws has also become a common source of high-protein food. In the European and American markets, Frozen Chicken Paws, as an emerging food, mainly appears in Asian food stores and cross-border e-commerce platforms, attracting many young consumers to try it.

The global Frozen Chicken Paws market size was estimated at USD 5569.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.70% during the forecast period.
