Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Frozen Mackerel competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. Frozen mackerel refers to whole round, headless, gutted, or cut portions of mackerel processed and frozen for global trade, retail, food service and further processing such as canning or grilling. In 2024, the global average price is approximately US$1,180 per ton, with an estimated trade volume of 3.92 million tons. Gross margins typically range from 12%-24%, depending on fish size, grading, cold storage cost, logistics efficiency and product specifications. The supply chain includes upstream fishing fleets and aquaculture sources; midstream processors perform grading, cleaning, freezing, packaging and export logistics; downstream users include seafood processors, restaurant chains, distributors, supermarkets and canned fish manufacturers. Frozen mackerel demand continues to increase due to its affordability, high protein content and suitability for grilling, canning and foodservice applications. Growth is supported by rising seafood consumption, expanding distribution networks and strong demand from processing hubs. Stable supply chains and cold-chain infrastructure upgrades will support mid-term growth.

The global Frozen Mackerel market size was estimated at USD 4626.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.20% during the forecast period.
