Abstracts

Full Truckload (FTL) transportation refers to a shipping method in which a shipper contracts an entire truck or trailer to transport goods that fill the entire vehicle. FTL shipments are typically used for larger quantities of cargo that require dedicated truck space. Less Than Truckload (LTL) transportation is a shipping method where multiple shippers share space in a single truck. Each shipper"s goods are consolidated onto a single truck, and the carrier makes multiple stops to deliver various shipments along a route.FTL transportation is a popular choice for businesses with large shipments or those that want their goods to be the sole cargo in a truck. It offers advantages such as faster transit times, reduced handling of goods, and often lower per-unit shipping costs for bulk items. The FTL market is highly competitive, with numerous carriers and brokers offering services to meet the demands of various industries. LTL transportation is ideal for businesses that have smaller shipments that do not require a full truck. It offers cost savings because shippers only pay for the space they use, making it a cost-effective choice for smaller loads. LTL carriers have extensive networks and routes, allowing them to efficiently serve a wide range of destinations and industries.

The global FTL And LTL Transportation market size was estimated at USD 16090.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.30% during the forecast period.
