Abstracts

Furfuryl alcohol is an organic compound containing furan. It is the most important food additive, as it occurs naturally during fermenting, aging, curing, and smoking natural food. Furfuryl alcohol is not an oil derived chemical. It is manufactured by basic raw materials such as waste vegetable materials such as sugar cane bagasse, oat hulls, corn cobs, and rice hulls. As a downstream deep processing industry for agricultural and forestry wastes such as corn cobs, the furfural-furfuryl alcohol industry chain, especially the corn cob-furfuryl alcohol production link, will produce a large amount of wastewater, waste gas and waste residue, and has long been in a state of "high pollution, high energy consumption and low yield". Furfural production companies are concentrated in the main corn producing areas. With the improvement of environmental protection requirements, small companies are constantly withdrawing from the market, and the entire industry's "de-capacity" process is relatively fast. By 2021, the furfural market has been in a state of tight supply.

The global Furfurylic Alcohol market size was estimated at USD 1106.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.30% during the forecast period.
