Abstracts

Glucuro lactone tablets, also known as calcium D-glucarate supplements, are oral formulations designed to support the body's detoxification processes by inhibiting the enzyme beta-glucuronidase, which plays a role in the enterohepatic recirculation of toxins, hormones, and certain carcinogens; these tablets are commonly marketed to promote liver health, hormone balance, and overall cellular detoxification, often appealing to health-conscious consumers seeking natural or complementary approaches to wellness. The market for glucuro lactone tablets is primarily driven by growing consumer awareness of detoxification and preventive health, increasing prevalence of lifestyle-related health issues, and a rising preference for dietary supplements that support metabolic and hormonal health. Key distribution channels include online retailers, health food stores, pharmacies, and specialty supplement shops, with North America and Europe representing the largest regional markets due to higher disposable incomes and well-established supplement cultures. Competition in this niche is intensifying as both established wellness brands and newer entrants expand their detoxification and liver support product lines, though growth is tempered by regulatory scrutiny, varying quality standards, and the need for more robust clinical evidence to substantiate health claims.

The global Glucuro lactone Tablets market size was estimated at USD 85.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.80% during the forecast period.
