Abstracts

A green bean coffee roaster is a piece of equipment used to roast green coffee beans into drinkable coffee. Green bean coffee roasters convert the chemical components of green coffee beans into complex aromas and flavors through the use of heat, usually using hot air or a direct heat source. During the roasting process, the coffee beans undergo a series of physical and chemical changes, including expansion, discoloration, and the release of aromatic substances, ultimately forming the roasted coffee with the various flavors and tastes we are familiar with. Green bean coffee roasters are usually designed to allow users to adjust the roasting time and temperature according to personal preference to achieve different flavors from light roasts to dark roasts.
