Abstracts

E-commerce for health supplements refers to a business model that facilitates the trading and service of health-related products such as health foods, dietary supplements, and functional foods through internet platforms. Its product range covers vitamins, minerals, herbal extracts, sports nutrition products, and specific functional products, expanding its target audience from traditional middle-aged and elderly consumers to younger consumers focused on health management. The core characteristics of this model are disintermediation and digital marketing, directly connecting brands and consumers through online channels and utilizing content marketing, live-streaming e-commerce, and big data analytics for precise promotion. Simultaneously, it is subject to strict regulation by multiple departments, including drug administration and market supervision, requiring assurance of product qualifications, advertising compliance, and information transparency. It is a complex business sector integrating retail, health consultation, and compliance management.The global health supplement e-commerce market has broad prospects, driven by a shift in global health consumption paradigms from "treatment" to "prevention." Currently, North America and Europe dominate the market, but the fastest growth engines are emerging markets such as the Asia-Pacific region. In the future, market growth will rely more on cross-border e-commerce, data-driven precision nutrition solutions, and personalized product innovation targeting specific demographics such as women and senior citizens.

The global Health Products E-commerce market size was estimated at USD 16542.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.80% during the forecast period.

This report offers a comprehensive and in-depth analysis of the global Health Products E-commerce market, covering all critical facets from a broad macroeconomic overview
