Report Overview

Hibiscus extract is derived from the flowers of the Hibiscus sabdariffa plant, commonly known as roselle, and is valued for its rich phytochemical content, including anthocyanins, flavonoids, and organic acids. It is widely used in the food and beverage industry as a natural coloring agent and flavor enhancer, particularly in herbal teas, juices, and functional beverages, due to its tart, cranberry-like taste and vibrant red pigment. Additionally, the extract is incorporated into dietary supplements and cosmetics for its antioxidant, anti-inflammatory, and potential cardiovascular benefits, supported by increasing consumer demand for plant-based and health-promoting ingredients. The market is influenced by growing awareness of its health properties, such as blood pressure regulation and skin health, alongside trends favoring clean-label and natural products in both the nutraceutical and personal care sectors.

The global Hibiscus Extract market size was estimated at USD 175.61 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.85% during the forecast period.
