Abstracts

High end Chinese spirits, or baijiu, are traditionally distilled alcoholic beverages made from fermented grains such as sorghum, rice, wheat, or corn, with a history dating back thousands of years and characterized by their strong aromatic profiles, complex production processes?often involving solid-state fermentation and distillation in clay jars?and aging in earthenware containers, resulting in a spirit that ranges from light and floral to pungent and savory, with premium varieties typically defined by their use of high-quality raw materials, adherence to time-honored techniques, terroir-specific production regions (e.g., Maotai from Guizhou), and brand prestige, positioning them as luxury goods often consumed during business banquets, official functions, and gift-giving occasions.

The global High End Chinese Spirits market size was estimated at USD 17240.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.80% during the forecast period.
