Abstracts

The market for horror films and television shows encompasses a broad range of content designed to elicit fear, suspense, and psychological unease among audiences, typically through themes involving supernatural entities, psychological terror, slasher violence, or dystopian scenarios. This market operates across various distribution platforms?including theatrical releases, streaming services, cable television, and digital rentals?and targets diverse demographics, though its core audience often includes younger viewers, particularly those aged 18?34. Key industry players include major studios, independent production companies, and streaming platforms, with revenue streams derived from box office sales, subscription fees, advertising, licensing, and merchandise. Market dynamics are influenced by cultural trends, technological advancements in special effects and distribution, seasonal demand peaks (such as around Halloween), and the genre?s adaptability to low-budget productions that can achieve high profitability. The horror genre has demonstrated consistent commercial resilience and growth, often yielding franchises and cult followings, while also serving as a testing ground for innovative storytelling and new talent.

The global Horror Film And Tv Show market size was estimated at USD 342.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.85% during the forecast period.
