Abstracts

Infrared sauna blankets are portable, flexible, and electrically powered devices that use far-infrared technology to generate heat, allowing users to experience the therapeutic benefits of a traditional sauna?such as detoxification, relaxation, improved circulation, pain relief, and potential weight loss?in a compact, at-home format. These blankets typically consist of layers of waterproof, heat-resistant materials embedded with carbon fiber or ceramic heating panels, which emit infrared rays that penetrate the skin to warm the body directly rather than heating the surrounding air, offering a more efficient and energy-conscious alternative to conventional saunas.
