Report Overview:

Interdental cleaners are tools used to better clean the gums and between the teeth, tools such as dental floss and Interdental Brush. Even the most efficient toothbrushing technique would not result in removal of all plaque deposits. Whilst mouthrinsing will help in further plaque control, use of dental floss and woodsticks are often recommended by dentists and dental hygienists.

These are recommended especially for patients who have particular need such as those with extensive fillings, crowns or bridge, orthodontic patients or patients with particular periodontal problems. Interdental cleaning aids are not generally recommended for children as they may damage their gums by incorrect usage.
