Abstracts

International freight transport services refer to transactions between parties from different countries, where one party provides transportation services to another to facilitate the cross-border movement of goods, with the latter paying remuneration. This service overcomes the spatial and temporal constraints between production and consumption through various modes of transport, including sea, air, land, and multimodal transport. Its core functions encompass the entire supply chain management, from factory pickup, packaging, booking, cross-border transportation, import/export customs clearance, warehousing, to domestic distribution. Production and consumption occur independently in two or more countries and are governed by both international treaties and domestic laws.The global freight market is expected to continue growing in the future. This growth is primarily driven by the booming development of cross-border e-commerce, the nearshore relocation of manufacturing, and consumers' increasing expectations for real-time visibility and rapid delivery. Multimodal transport solutions will become increasingly important due to their ability to optimize routes, improve efficiency, and reduce costs. Simultaneously, the deep application of digital technologies will fundamentally change traditional freight operation models, enhancing supply chain transparency and operational efficiency. Geographically, the Asia-Pacific region, with its rapid industrialization, e-commerce expansion, and continuous infrastructure investment, will become a key engine of market growth.

The global International Freight Transportation Services market size was estimated at USD 4209.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 3.10% during the forecast period.
