Report Overview

Ketorolac injection is a nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drug (NSAID) used primarily for short-term management of moderate to severe acute pain in hospital or clinical settings, often as an alternative to opioids due to its potent analgesic effects without the risk of addiction. It works by inhibiting cyclooxygenase (COX) enzymes, reducing prostaglandin synthesis and thereby alleviating pain and inflammation. The product is typically administered intramuscularly or intravenously, making it suitable for post-surgical pain, trauma, or other acute conditions requiring rapid relief. However, its use is restricted to a maximum of five days due to risks of gastrointestinal bleeding, renal impairment, and cardiovascular complications, limiting its application to controlled medical environments. The market for Ketorolac injection is driven by demand for effective non-opioid pain management solutions, particularly in light of the opioid crisis, though its growth is tempered by safety concerns and competition from alternative analgesics.

The global Ketorolac Injection market size was estimated at USD 1089.11 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 2.69% during the forecast period.
