Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Kopi Luwak competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. Kopi Luwak is a rare coffee originating from Indonesia, produced from coffee beans that have been eaten, fermented in the digestive system of Asian palm civets, and excreted. This unique process creates distinctive flavor profiles: 1) Enzymatic digestion reduces bitterness; 2) Natural fermentation enhances body and sweetness; 3) Develops characteristic earthy and caramel notes. The beans undergo thorough washing, sun-drying, and roasting, sold as whole beans or ground powder primarily to premium coffee connoisseurs and luxury markets, ranking among the world's most expensive coffee varieties. The Kopi Luwak market confronts dual challenges of ethical consumption and quality assurance: 1) Animal welfare concerns drive artificial fermentation technologies; 2) Counterfeiting issues spur origin certification and DNA tracing systems; 3) Specialty coffee culture promotes process standardization. Consumer demographics show polarization: traditional buyers value wild-sourced authenticity while younger generations prioritize sustainability. Duty-free and e-commerce dominate sales, though professional baristas' criticism of flavor inconsistency limits foodservice penetration.

The global Kopi Luwak market size was estimated at USD 128.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.80% during the forecast period.
