Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Leech Extract Powder (Hirudin Powder) competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations.Leech extract powder (Hirudin Powder) is a natural anticoagulant protein derived from the salivary glands of leeches (Hirudo medicinalis). Hirudin is a potent anticoagulant that works by binding to thrombin and inhibiting its activity, thus preventing blood clot formation. This unique property has made hirudin widely used in the treatment and prevention of thrombotic diseases, including deep vein thrombosis (DVT), pulmonary embolism (PE), and other cardiovascular conditions related to blood clots.The production of leech extract powder has evolved from natural extraction to recombinant DNA technology. Early hirudin extraction relied on direct collection from leeches, but due to issues such as low yield and instability, modern production has shifted to recombinant DNA technology. This advancement has significantly increased production efficiency while ensuring more consistent quality. Hirudin powder is commonly used in the pharmaceutical industry as a key ingredient for anticoagulant medications. In addition to its use in thrombotic treatments, hirudin is also being explored for anticoagulation during surgeries and in intensive care units to prevent thrombosis.

The global Leech Extract Powder (Hirudin Powder) market size was estimated at USD 3500.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 2.50% during the forecast period.

This report offers a comprehensive and in-depth analysis of the global Leech Extract Powder (Hirudin Powder) market, covering all critical facets from a broad
