Abstracts

Lemborexant, sold under the brand name Dayvigo, is an orexin receptor antagonist used to treat insomnia, specifically targeting difficulties with sleep onset and/or maintenance in adults. It is taken orally and works by blocking both OX1 and OX2 orexin receptors, which play a key role in regulating wakefulness. Common side effects include somnolence, fatigue, headache, and abnormal dreams. Lemborexant has a relatively long elimination half-life, ranging from 17 to 55 hours, with its peak effect occurring about 1 to 3 hours after ingestion. Unlike benzodiazepines or Z-drugs, it does not interact with GABA receptors, offering a different mechanism of action for managing sleep disorders. Approved for medical use in the United States in December 2019, lemborexant is classified as a Schedule IV controlled substance, indicating a low potential for misuse.

The global Lemborexant Tablets market size was estimated at USD 337.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.80% during the forecast period.
