Abstracts

Life accident insurance is a type of coverage that provides financial compensation in the event of accidental death, dismemberment, or disability, offering a lump-sum payment or periodic benefits to policyholders or their beneficiaries if an accident results in specified injuries or loss of life. It is distinct from life insurance in that it specifically covers incidents deemed accidental?such as vehicle collisions, falls, or other unforeseen events?rather than death from natural causes or illness, and policies often include provisions for partial payouts in cases of non-fatal but severe injuries like loss of limbs, eyesight, or permanent disability. This insurance is typically offered as either a standalone product or as a rider to broader life or health insurance policies, catering to individuals seeking additional protection against the financial consequences of unexpected accidents.

The global Life Accident Insurance market size was estimated at USD 280.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.25% during the forecast period.
