Abstracts

Live TV streaming services, also known as virtual multichannel video programming distributors (vMVPDs), are subscription-based platforms that deliver linear television channels over the internet, effectively replacing traditional cable or satellite TV. These services offer live broadcasts of news, sports, and entertainment channels, often accompanied by cloud-based DVR functionality, on-demand content libraries, and multi-device accessibility. The core value proposition centers on convenience, personalization, and cost savings compared to legacy pay-TV models.
