Abstracts

A manual honey extractor is a mechanical device used in apiculture to separate honey from honeycombs without destroying the wax structure, enabling beekeepers to reuse the comb for future honey production. It typically consists of a drum or container, a rotating basket or cage to hold frames, and a hand-crank mechanism that creates centrifugal force to fling honey out of the uncapped cells, which then collects at the bottom for drainage. Unlike electric extractors, manual models do not require electricity, making them suitable for small-scale beekeepers, hobbyists, or those operating in remote or off-grid locations. They are valued for their affordability, simplicity, durability, and low maintenance, though they demand more physical effort and time compared to automated alternatives.

The global Manual Honey Extractor market size was estimated at USD 35.6 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 3.50% during the forecast period.
